AFESA Ethics Committee Spotlight / Chair

Adam Momberger — Administrative District Chief Johnson City Fire Department

Since 2001, I've dedicated my career to the fire service, spending over two decades with the Johnson City Fire Department. I began by rising through the ranks of the suppression division, but in 2022, I transitioned to a new role in administration. In my current position, I'm responsible for data analysis, accreditation, and overseeing the Training Division.

I want to leave the fire service in a better place than I found it. We are not just responding to emergencies; we're building a legacy. Let's work together to leave the fire service better, stronger, and more capable than we found it.

My philosophy is simple: fire analysts shouldn't just crunch the numbers. We need to dig deeper, understand the human element behind the data, and reveal the full story. Technology is a powerful tool, but it will never replace the ethical judgment and critical thinking of the people who make life-saving decisions.

AFESA connects fire personnel with a powerful network of peers and leaders dedicated to the advancement of the fire service. It provides unparalleled access to professional development, cutting-edge resources, and a platform to influence the future of the industry. By joining AFESA, you gain a voice, an advocate, and a community committed to your career growth and well-being.
